

Living in a time when working, relaxing and learning have all converged at home, living rooms have become much more important than ever before. As such, it calls for a more friendly environment, a look that spices up the mood, and more living spaces to relax.

The creativity in living layouts has soared over the years with an endless list of choices and options to pick. However, trends 2021 may not necessarily remain the same next year, it is rare for a layout to stand the test of time since new ideas emerge every day.

Interior design is one of the most competitive industries ever. Staying on top requires a solid idea and massive effort to put together a nice layout to beat the competition or at least trend.

With the living room being the central place and most trafficked, a state of the art entertainment equipment is just part of the trending designs.

Many designers have offered their thoughts on the most trending layouts and what to expect in 2022 after witnessing the past year marked with people restricting to their homes and working remotely.

The pandemic has ushered new living room ideas to calm people down and give them a taste of style during such difficult times.

Living room decor, furniture, home textiles, and accessories are updated every year. Therefore, the desire to stay up to trends stirs curiosity to try new things every day.

The living room is a gathering place with friends, family members, and even now that we're all restricted our homes suddenly have home offices that make it ideal to have some special equipment. A must-have to say the least.

Whether living in a traditional home or mobile homes, decor trends still have their way of making the place stylish and modern. Home decor ranges in the budget, so you shouldn't be worried about the cost of making it over your living room.

It's the same way modern mobile homes for sale give you value while living on a budget compared to traditional homes.

Therefore, you may want to search for modern mobile homes for sale around you to cut down on the stress of buying a traditional home if you don't have the right budget for the same.

We all expect trends 2021 will hit up and outshine the past year with new exciting ideas coming forth.

Now let's break down some of the 2021 living room trends that you should consider.

2021 Living Room Trends

Here are some of the living room trends layout in 2021:

- Furniture with Curves Replacing Angular Pieces
- Multi-use Furniture
- The travel-inspired decor is gaining traction in homes
- More of Natural Elements is also on The Trend
- Warm Colors Making Statement
- All Comfortable Everything
- Lots of Layers is Expected

- Statement Gallery Making Waves

Furniture with Curves Replacing Angular Pieces

The most common boxy type of furniture in 2021 is going to fade away, or rather face some competition. Sofas with curves are on-trend and offer the house a unique taste and warm feeling. Interior designer KD Reid While speaking with the Insider said that curvy furniture will be trending in 2021.

“No more boxy furniture, we’ll see more furniture with curves and rounded edges that add coziness to an interior,” he said.

To add on top, adding a circular throw pillow and curved end tables will bring style even in a bigger manner. Curved sofas have become central furnishing design elements in 2021. When curved furniture is in the picture, it can be traced back as far as the 1950s when it made its big appearance.

But somehow they made a comeback last year, and have been so popular, trending all over with some unique sets arranged in a pure state of the art.

One thing for sure is curved furniture and other elements in the room demand space and attention. The style has inspired many designers to put their skills to the test.

For example, a Swedish designer Jonas Wagell is inspired by curvy Mid-Century designs. The Mid-Century design has been the inspiration for many in the interior design industry.

Furniture fabrics vary, based on your taste you can pick what fits well in your house. The variety of fabrics gives you the freedom to choose without worrying about the fear of missing out on what will match your dream living room layout.

Multi-use Furniture

One thing we all can't deny is the fact that we've been confined to our homes for the better part of the last year or so. Not everyone was prepared for such to happen at least not to the extent of working from home.

In fact, most companies were just doing pilot tests of working from home all over the world before the pandemic hit.

Now how does all that relate to these trends? Well, very few people have a home office, the majority often spend extra hours in the office in case of plenty of work to be done before heading to their homes. Everyone working from home has created a shortage of spaces.

This gave rise to multi-purpose furniture that changes function in no time. Also, it is one way to save on space in a congested room especially now that all family members seem to be hanging around.

For example, sofa beds have become so popular lately as they can both be used for the normal sitting arrangement and at night turned into a bed.

The travel-inspired decor is gaining traction in homes

While the pandemic has brought about being confined to our homes, one notable thing that has emerged and quickly gaining traction is the travel-inspired decor in homes across the globe.

“We’re seeing people use their deferred travel dreams as inspiration for their interiors,” says Farah Merhi, a professional interior designer and founder of Inspire Me, while speaking to Insider. “Artwork, patterns, and colors from other regions are big right now.”

The travel inspiration has been on trend for quite some time now, giving living rooms a breath of new life of travel dream artistic.

More of Natural Elements is also on The Trend

Natural materials can be incorporated into a room in so many ways to create a seamless style. It can be in the form of wicker, rattan, and grasscloth-wrapped pieces.

While we yearn for more time outside during this time of the pandemic, the ability to bring the outside inside with palettes from nature can be so satisfying and calming in a way.

“Finding ways to bring in more natural light and layers of different types of light within a space can really transform a room,” says Saudah Saleem, founder of an award-winning interior design firm.

Besides, Plastics and synthetics may be replaced by natural fibers and textiles this year.

Natural materials have a way of creating a unique taste in a room and adding value to the house generally. For example, doing a wooden floor will for sure increase the value of your house without a doubt.

Warm Colors Making Statement

Colors play a huge role in interior design, it’s like the Romeo and Juliet of interior design, they offer the final touch in bringing a living room into life. Across the globe, people have been creative with using different color schemes to paint walls into a state of the art.

Think of those pillow covers and throw blankets, how about giving them a warm color?

“We started to see tones appear in 2020, and I think our living rooms will embrace warm tones full-on in 2021," says Tiffany Leigh Piotrowski, a Toronto-Based interior designer.

"I think we will see a lot less grays and neutrals," she says. "People want to inject their personality into their space."

All Comfortable Everything

"I think living rooms will have a major focus on comfort, filled with soft edges, comfy textiles, organic prints, and earthy neutrals," says designer Kerra Michele Huerta, an award-winning Washington DC Interior Designer. "Living rooms are where we all go to relax and unwind, and with all the stress of 2020, I think our senses will need some extra TLC next year."

She continues to list types of cushy pieces that will become commonplace in 2021 such as sculptural cloud sofas, oversized ergonomic chaises, furry upholstery, and even elevated bean bags.

In 2021 people want more living space to relax with their family since they have little to do while at home under a pandemic.

Lots of Layers is Expected

You may want to design your dream vignette by placing a few sculptural trinkets atop a stack of books or layering two leaning pieces of framed artwork on a living room shelving unit.

Besides, layering rugs can be essential to add dimension to space and also a way to protect your floor in the process.

"Minimalism is always nice, but having a heavily layered, styled coffee table, console table, mantle, or chest feels full and lovely," says Elizabeth Stamos, an interior designer, "It's an Instagram moment at every turn!"

Statement Gallery Making Waves

While the gallery on the walls may allow you to work on a lot of pieces in your living room, you shouldn't discount the power of one big painting or canvas on your wall, it can have a stunning visual interest than the former. As they often say, sometimes "less is more" and that is reflective of one big painting and what it does.

“Everything from vintage posters to large-scale abstracts or drawings will be used to personalize our spaces,” says Saudah Saleem, an interior designer.

Pure work of art on the walls often spices up the room. Finding the right balance of colors on the walls and the kind of gallery can be satisfying in a way. The least your walls deserve is some good painting, but if you can go higher, finding a perfect canvas would make a huge difference.

To Sum Up

Trends for 2021 has seen some of the most exciting living room trends. People are thinking outside the box to bring ideas into life while living under unprecedented times in the history of beings.

Trends 2021 in the living room style haven’t disappointed so far, we can agree on that. Natural materials being at the center stage among other stylish trends in 2021 is just the tip of the iceberg

The living room design trends 2021 will continue to boom as the year matures and most probably the coming year will even be more exciting as far as design is concerned.

Ideas come and go, style doesn’t last that long, by the end of the years, we’ll see what will still be on the trend and what new has made its way to the industry where creativity is endless.